

I can't quote scripture like many others. But I know the Bible, and even sister White says that we should be ONE. We shouldn't be arguing amongst ourselves, especially when our pastors were not even present to help us understand or explain the situation to us better. If we think someone did something, we should go to that person, rather than just throwing out accusations at different people we may suspect. We shouldn't be talking about how we should stop arguing while continuing to strife. We also have to remember not to be a respecter of persons, which can be hard at times. Especially if we form a tight bond with an individual and then something happens. My favorite thing about this church is our family bond. But we cannot allow that bond to come between us and the truth. Between us and Christ. Instead we should all pray for those not in the truth, to come to the truth, whatever that may mean. Whoever it may be. We need to come together not divide. Especially in these times. We are too close to allow the devil to divide us like everyone before us. I left the Pray and Study group because I cannot allow it to hinder my own mind and soul. I won't stay around contention, hypocrisy, or anything else that goes against scripture. I know every one meant well in their own mind. But we have to stop and think and pray before we say something. If we are confused about anything being said, simply email or message someone (Pastor Nic or Pastor Alvin) to ask for understanding. I pray we all have learned from this and that we all repent and get back on track as one body, serving Christ.
